

Talking about Vaccination...

YOUR CHOICES...

In Australia, final decisions about medical procedures or intervention for a child are primarily the responsibility of the parents. Vaccination is not compulsory. Currently the options for vaccination and health care are as follows:

1. Follow the recommended Government schedule for vaccination.
2. Select the vaccines which you, after investigation, have deemed to be safe, effective and essential. Discuss options with a doctor.
3. Homeopathic prophylaxis administered by a qualified homeopath.
5. Forget, ignore or dismiss disease prevention altogether. Combined with a refined diet and sedentary lifestyle this typically results in regular visits to a chemist or doctor, and the increased reliance on over-the-counter or prescription drugs/medicines to suppress inconvenient symptoms.
4. Register as a Conscientious Objector (download form on our site). Practice holistic health and hygiene which generally includes a diet of whole foods, adequate rest, clean water, fresh air, sunshine, exercise and a supportive and nurturing environment. Focuses on preventative care with the support of like-minded and qualified practitioners.
5. Apply some or part of the above options.

Investigate before you agree to any medical procedure.
